SUMMARY OF ACTIVITIES AND INTERESTS

Since 1977, I have performed diagnostic psychological testing and behavioral treatment planning, concentrating on children with developmental disabilities including autism. As a certified school psychologist, I have helped intellectually and emotionally challenged children to achieve greater success in school. I have presented my professional work in the areas of behavioral treatment design and outcome measurement at state and national meetings of professionals and advocates. I provide leadership to a nonprofit Foundation that provides training and supervision to professionals who deliver treatment services funded by the Medicaid EPSDT program at no cost to families, regardless of income or the existence of private insurance. I offer consultations to parents of children with disabilities throughout the world (and the professionals who collaborate with them), based on established standards of practice and the treatment outcome measurement and funding strategies that I have developed and tested successfully in Pennsylvania since 1981.

I have received two commendations from the US Congress, two commendations from the Pennsylvania House of Representatives, a commendation from the Pennsylvania Senate and commendations from the President’s New Freedom Commission on Mental Health and from the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services (CMS) and have testified several times as an expert witness in Federal court regarding EPSDT funding for mental health treatment services for children. I have been married to my wife, Kathie, since 1980 and have two children.
